During my time at Redheugh, things were awful. One of the staff members was sexually abusing and physically abusing some of the young boys. I witnessed this myself, and it was extremely distressing. I was still young, and seeing something like that left me feeling scared, confused, and unsure of what to do. When he realised that I had found out what he was doing, he turned his attention to me. He began physically abusing me as well, hitting me whenever he got the chance. It was terrifying.

It became a regular occurrence. Whenever he managed to get me on my own, he would beat me up. This went on for a long period of time, and I remember feeling constantly on edge, never knowing when it would happen next. The fear of being alone with him was overwhelming. I felt trapped, knowing that he had already hurt others and was now targeting me. There was no sense of safety anywhere.

Eventually, he was convicted for something — I believe he received around ten years. Even though he was finally held accountable, the damage had already been done. The things I witnessed, especially the boys being abused and sexually abused, stayed with me. Seeing that level of harm being done to children my age was something I never forgot. And then being beaten myself, over and over again, only added to the trauma.

All of this has had a huge impact on my mental health and my life moving forward. The fear, the helplessness, and the constant violence shaped the way I saw myself and the world around me. It affected my confidence, my sense of safety, and my ability to trust people. Even now, the memories still affect me. What happened at Redheugh wasn't just something that happened in the moment — it has stayed with me throughout my life, and I am still dealing with the emotional consequences of it.
