Reardons Hall

In this home the staff were physically violent towards me, I would get beaten with extreme violence and called horrible names and hit with belts and this was very common. At times, the staff in the home would starve me and I would sometimes be locked out in a wee building near the home for two or three days and he got one meal a day but would have to eat it in the pitch black. If we ran away, we would be brought back and always monitored by two staff and I wasn't allowed contact with any other child in the home, this would even be the case when showering or bathing, the two staff would still be there holding each of my arms, it was always two staff members watching me. There were also times that I would be put and kept into isolation. The bullying was so bad between the children that I used to sometimes have to become a bully as well as that felt like the only way to survive. I overheard sexual abuse of another girl and boy and to this day I heard the screams from them both and I struggle to get them out of my memory. While I was in here, I was separated from siblings and was denied family visits, I did not see any family throughout my time here.

The punishment in this home was the same but very inhumane, I felt like an animal while I was here. The staff were constantly physically violent, and I remember on one occasion I nearly strangled myself with a belt and had to be taken to the hospital. I did inform my social worker of this and, but nothing was done on the back of this. I and other children did run away on a few occasions, and we would always have to go back. I daily witnessed the physical abuse of other children in the home. Again, at this home I was separated from siblings and was denied family visits.

I do feel like my experience in care as effected my life and contributed to poor mental health, my experience in care has ruined my life and has affected my relationships, I have five children of whom I have no relationship with as they are also in care and I am not allowed to have any form of relationship with them or even speak to them.
