Your statement for Care setting 1 continued

I spent a short period at Burnside, only a few months, and my experience there was generally okay. I actually remember having a fairly positive time during that placement. Nothing significant happened that caused me distress, and in many ways it felt like a calm period compared to what came later. I didn't feel unsafe there, and although it wasn't perfect, I look back on Burnside as a place where I was able to get through each day without fear or constant anxiety.

St. Johns in Glasgow was completely different. My time there was marked by physical and verbal abuse from staff, something no child should ever have to experience. Staff would hit us, slap us, and kick us. They would restrain us, but it wasn't proper restraint for safety—it was violent and deliberately painful. I remember having my head slammed against the ground, being kicked in the back, and feeling completely powerless. One of the teachers used to grab me by my genitals, and another would try to kick me in the backside. These weren't isolated incidents; they were part of the daily environment. The verbal abuse was constant too—shouting in my face, belittling me, and making me feel small and afraid. I also witnessed other children being abused in similar ways, which added another layer of fear and helplessness. It created an atmosphere where you never knew what was going to happen next or who would be targeted.

The long-term psychological impact of that environment has stayed with me. It made me distance myself from people and taught me not to trust adults, especially those in positions of authority. I developed a deep discomfort around authority figures, always expecting aggression or punishment even when none was coming. It pushed me into isolation, both emotionally and socially. I learned to keep people at arm's length because closeness felt unsafe. These experiences shaped how I see the world and how I interact with others, and the effects have followed me into adulthood. Even now, I can trace certain reactions, fears, and behaviours back to what I went through at St. Johns. It wasn't just a difficult time—it changed me in ways I'm still working to understand.
