My first memories of being in care are of being scared, nervous, upset, and extremely emotional. I was taken away from my family, something I had never experienced before, and I did not understand what was happening. From the moment I arrived at Burnside in Dundee, I felt fear straight away.

The environment was chaotic and frightening. Older children were running around and fighting with staff, and there was a constant sense of stress and danger. No one tried to settle me in or comfort me. My bags were flung into a dormitory and I was left on my own to cope.

There were two staff members in particular who abused me: Mr Burns and Michael Duff. Both were horrible to me in different ways.

Mr Burns was extremely physically violent. He regularly beat me. He would punch and kick me and use a belt as punishment. His hands were the most painful. He was a very big man compared to me, and when he attacked me, I was often left breathless and unable to breathe properly because of the pain. I was terrified of him.

Mr Burns would punish me simply for crying. I remember him taking me out of my bed at night and dragging me to the PE hall, where he made me stand alone in the dark and cold, on the centre spot, wearing only my underpants. He left me there for around six hours before coming back for me. This was humiliating and frightening.

He would also push me along the corridors for no reason at all, causing me to fall. He regularly used violence against me simply because he could.

Michael Duff abused me mentally and emotionally. He constantly picked on me and tormented me. He would allow other children to go swimming or take part in activities but would single me out and force me to stay behind at the home. He deliberately wound me up and isolated me. He never allowed me to be involved with the other children. When I cried, he would laugh at me. This made me feel worthless, targeted, and completely alone.

The staff would also force me to fight older children for their entertainment. This behaviour was accepted and encouraged. They wanted to turn us against each other. I was bullied and beaten not only by adults but also by older children, with staff approval.

I was often locked in my dorm, but they also had a juvenile cell, where I was kept a lot of the time. In the cell I was scared, cold, and most importantly, hungry. I felt completely out of my depth. I was being abused by adults who were supposed to protect me. They made me suffer.

There were other children there who were also being abused, but I felt that they had it out for me. They embarrassed me in every way they could, in front of the other children, stripping me of any dignity.

I was at Burnside in Dundee for around 6–8 weeks, but this was the worst time of my life. Eventually, I made my mum aware of what was happening. She took me straight back to the board and demanded that I be allowed to come home.

By the time I left, I had been beaten so badly that my body was black and blue. I was a shell of a person. I had suffered repeated beatings from adults and older children, was constantly singled out, isolated, and locked in cells. To this day, I still suffer from nightmares and anxiety. I worry constantly when I think about what happened to me. This experience has affected my relationships and my ability to trust people. I was failed at a very young age, and what I endured at Burnside has played a major role in affecting my life both then and now I suffer with very bad anxiety, night terrors and do not trust a soul.
