When I think back to the places I lived as a child, the memories come in fragments, but the feelings are still sharp. I remember moving into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ford, though I can't recall exactly how long I stayed there. What I do remember is the confusion and fear. They would accuse me of behaving in a sexual way toward them, but the truth was the opposite. They were the ones acting inappropriately toward me. Even as a child, I knew something was deeply wrong, but I had no power, no voice, and nowhere to turn. I carried the blame they put on me, even though none of it belonged to me.

Your statement for Care setting 2 continued

After that, I was moved into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan. At first, I hoped things would be different, but their teenage daughter, Jennifer, began touching me in ways that were not appropriate. It happened repeatedly, usually at night. She slept in the top bunk and I slept in the bottom, and I would wake to find her in my bed, doing things I didn't understand but instinctively knew were wrong. I felt trapped, confused, and ashamed, even though I had done nothing to cause it. I didn't know how to tell anyone, and I doubted anyone would believe me if I tried. Eventually,

Your statement for Care setting 3 continued

I was moved again, this time to Pitteuchar Children's Home in Fife. I thought a children's home might finally be a place where I would be safe, but instead I faced a different kind of cruelty. Staff members would force soap into my mouth and hit me for reasons I couldn't understand. They bullied me, called me horrible names, and made me feel small and unwanted. They would leave me alone in my room for hours, ignoring me as if I didn't exist. If I mispronounced a word, they would strike me. If I used my left hand, they would hit me with a ruler and mock me for it. Every day felt like a test I was destined to fail.

All of these experiences shaped me in ways I'm still trying to understand. I was a child who needed care, protection, and stability, but instead I was met with harm, blame, and neglect. Looking back, I can see clearly that none of this was my fault. I was placed in environments where the adults failed me again and again. Telling this story is difficult, but it's also a way of reclaiming my voice — something I was never allowed to have back then.
