I have been in care since I was very young, and my earliest memories are from Ardgale, the Highlands care home, where I was placed from around 3 years old until I was 5. Being taken from my family and siblings left me terrified, anxious, and emotionally shattered. Nobody helped me to settle in, and I remember feeling completely alone in a strange environment. I was grieving the loss of my father, which had led to me being taken into care, and I had no support at all. I vividly remember being left in a big room, with the door locked, a few toys scattered around, and no staff ever checking on me. During my time there, I was subjected to sexual abuse that has haunted me ever since. One day, while playing in the woods, two older boys, around 11 and 12, raped me. I returned to the care home and told my sister what had happened. She reported it to the staff, but they accused me of lying and treated me differently. Weeks later, I was separated from my sister. The abuse at Ardgale was not only sexual. I struggled with bedwetting, and the staff humiliated me for it. They would rub the wet sheets on my face in front of other children, wake me early, and force me into a freezing bath, then make me get back into the wet sheets. I felt powerless, degraded, and completely unsafe.

At age 5, I was moved to Urqhart House in Houston, where I stayed until I was 10. The abuse continued immediately. Mrs. Chandler, the matron, was extremely strict, constantly shouting and screaming at us. She and other staff physically abused me—they would punch, kick, pull my hair, push me around the corridors, and punish me for minor things. Because I was small and timid, older children tried to protect me, but this often resulted in them being beaten too.

Punishments were cruel and relentless. I was forced to sit in a corner for hours, sometimes given cod liver oil forcibly, or made to stay at the table all night if I could not swallow my food. I had a difficulty swallowing meat, and they would keep me there for hours, while other children slept. Staff would watch us in the bath, sometimes forcing us to use ink in humiliating ways. They monitored our bathroom visits and refused to let us leave until we had completed them. This constant physical and mental torment left me anxious, fearful, and emotionally broken.

Family visits were forbidden, and I was made to feel unwanted and rejected every single day. For five long years, I was beaten, bullied, terrorized, and made to believe I had no worth.

Your statement for Care setting 3 continued

At age 10, I was placed with foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson, in Glenburn, where I stayed until I was 13. The abuse continued. Their youngest daughter was jealous of me and deliberately provoked situations where I would get blamed. Mrs. Donaldson, the mother, was vicious, physically slapping me and threatening that I would end up on the streets. She would take out her anger from arguments with her husband on me. I felt like a human punching bag, constantly tormented by both the mother and her daughter. I was denied basic necessities, including clothing, underwear, and toys. When I raised this with my social worker, I discovered that no allowance was being spent on me, further emphasizing my feeling of worthlessness.

At age 13, I was moved to Chapel House care home in Paisley. Here, I felt a sense of relief and safety for the first time in a long while, but unfortunately only briefly. I was then moved to a foster family in Erskine. The house was huge, dark, and frightening, and I felt completely unsafe. I ran away after one night and sought refuge with my brother's care unit, only to be separated from him immediately by a social worker.

I was finally placed at Beach Avenue care home in Hunter Hill, Paisley, where I stayed from age 13 until I turned 18. While this placement was the most positive of my time in care, it could not undo the trauma I had already endured. I finally experienced some comfort, but I was deeply aware that I had never had a stable, loving family.

The long-term effects of the abuse I suffered are profound and ongoing. I have struggled with severe anxiety, depression, PTSD, and insomnia. The experiences of sexual, physical, and emotional abuse have left deep scars that affect my life to this day. I feel that my childhood was stolen from me, that my life has been irreversibly shaped by fear, pain, and neglect, and that I continue to struggle under the weight of the trauma inflicted during those years in care.
