suffered abuse from a very young age in my family home. Throughout my childhood I was subjected to severe mental, physical, and sexual abuse. There were two separate court cases relating to the sexual abuse I endured. One of the men responsible was sent to prison. I am still unsure what happened to the second individual. Social Services were aware of what was happening to me at home and of the abuse I was suffering, yet for a long time I remained in that environment, continuing to be harmed.

Eventually, I was removed from my family and placed into foster care. I was placed with a foster family in Armadale, Phoebe and Ronnie Walker, at the age of 11, and I stayed with them for approximately two years. When I first arrived, I felt relief at being taken away from my parent, but my understanding of what a normal family life was had already been badly damaged. I had never experienced love, safety, or care at home, so this was completely unfamiliar to me.

For the first time in my life, I felt relatively safe. That feeling alone was overwhelming. I was scared, confused, and traumatised, but also relieved.

However, I was never supported to talk about what had happened to me. When I tried to speak about my abuse, I was told it was not to be spoken about. I had no one to talk to, no counselling, and no safe space to process what I had endured. The trauma was simply buried and ignored.

While living with Phoebe and Ronnie Walker, I began to experience some sense of normality and comfort for the first time in my life. That stability lasted around two years, but the damage had already been done, and the lack of emotional support meant my trauma was never addressed.

Your statement for Care setting 2 continued

Around the age of 12–13, I was placed into Edinburgh – Vanderhall Home, where I stayed for one to two years. From the moment I arrived, I was terrified. The environment was chaotic, overwhelming, and unsafe. There were people of all different ages running around, shouting, fighting, and causing constant disruption. Reality hit me immediately. This place was horrific.

We were left to fend for ourselves. There was no protection, no structure, and no care. We were treated like criminals rather than vulnerable children.

Although the staff were not physically abusive towards me, the mental abuse and neglect were extreme. I was left alone, locked away, with no one to speak to, and expected to survive amongst older, more aggressive children. It was constant fight or flight.

During this time, I was introduced to drugs, which I used to block out the memories and pain. I began self-harming, and this was ignored. I was visibly suffering and received no help, guidance, or protection. Instead of helping me, the system was pushing me towards an early grave. I was completely abandoned emotionally and mentally at a time when I was at my most vulnerable.

At around 14–15 years old, I was placed closer to home in Bathgate Children's Home, where I remained until I was 16. Being closer to home triggered overwhelming memories of my earlier abuse. This is when my PTSD fully began to surface. I experienced panic attacks, constant fear, and had no ability to control my emotions. I was deeply anxious, distressed, and unstable.

There were a small number of staff who tried to help. One staff member, Duff McDonald, who I still speak to today, genuinely cared and looked out for us. There was also a woman named Janice, who would sometimes comfort me. However, they were not always there, and they were vastly outnumbered by staff who were either ineffective or completely overwhelmed.

The home itself was completely out of control. The children ruled the care home, not the staff. There were daily fights, severe bullying, and violence from older children. I was beaten, targeted, and constantly afraid. Staff often did nothing, and at times staff themselves would get into physical confrontations with the children. I lived in a constant state of stress and fear. Underage sex, drinking, and drug use were rampant, and we were left to do this without intervention. I was groomed by other children, and because of my history of sexual abuse, I did not understand that what was happening was wrong. This was another severe failure to protect me. I was frequently found blackout drunk on the streets, yet no meaningful action was taken to help me or address the root causes of my behaviour. I was never given understanding, therapy, or guidance. I was failed at every stage.

The trauma, neglect, abuse, and exposure to violence destroyed my mental health. Growing up, my mental health was completely unmanaged, and I continue to suffer today. I have severe PTSD, anxiety, and depression. I eventually checked myself into rehabilitation to try to rebuild my life. While rehab helped me learn right from wrong and I am proud that I took that step on my own, it did not stop the memories. The drink and drugs stopped, but the trauma never did.

The impact of my childhood has followed me into adulthood. I struggle daily. I find communication extremely difficult and at one point was so anxious that I barely spoke and had to relearn how to communicate. I do not trust people. I cannot build relationships. I have always been on my own and remain single because I do not trust the world or those in it.

I am now a shell of the person I could have been. The abuse, neglect, bullying, sexual assault, and repeated failures of the care system have left permanent damage. What I endured was horrific, and the lack of protection and support has affected every part of my life, both then and now.
