Your statement for Care setting 1 continued

I still remember the day I was placed into Burnside Children's Home on Davidson Road in Alexandria. I was young, scared, and hoping that maybe this place would give me some kind of stability. Instead, it became the beginning of some of the darkest experiences of my life. From the start, the staff spoke to me with cruelty. Their voices were sharp, filled with insults that cut deeper than I knew how to express. The verbal abuse was constant, and it didn't take long before it turned physical. I was hit more times than I could count—slapped, punched, kicked—until I stopped trying to understand why it was happening.

Sleep wasn't even a refuge. They would keep us awake for entire nights, shouting and banging on doors and walls whenever we drifted off. I remember sitting there exhausted, my eyes burning, my body aching, knowing that if I closed my eyes for too long, someone would come storming in to jolt me awake. It felt like they wanted to break us down, to make us too tired to resist or even think.

When I was moved to Ballikinrain Castle in Balforn, I hoped things might change. Instead, it was like stepping into a different version of the same nightmare. The violence was constant and unpredictable. I could be walking down a hallway or sitting quietly, and suddenly I'd be hit for no reason at all. They made me stand facing a wall for hours, staring at wallpaper until my legs trembled. They called it discipline, but it felt more like humiliation for their own amusement.

They forced me to do pointless tasks, things that made no sense, as if the goal was simply to remind me that I had no control. They locked me in my room for long stretches, sometimes without food, leaving me alone with fear and confusion. I remember the hunger, the loneliness, the feeling of being completely forgotten.

Nights were the worst. I would wake up and find staff in my room, far too close, touching me in ways that made me freeze. I didn't understand why it was happening or how to make it stop. Even the shower wasn't safe. I would try to wash quickly, hoping for a moment of privacy, but they would come in and watch me, stripping away any sense of safety or dignity I had left.

It wasn't just me. The other children were going through the same things. You could see it in their eyes—the fear, the exhaustion, the quiet way they carried themselves. We didn't talk about it much, maybe because we were too scared or because we didn't have the words. But we all knew.

Looking back, I realise how much those places shaped me. Not because they helped me grow, but because I had to survive them. I learned to stay alert, to read danger in every sound, to shrink myself so I wouldn't be noticed. None of that was normal. None of it was okay. I was a child who needed care, and instead I was treated like a problem to be controlled.

Telling this now feels like reclaiming something. My voice. My truth. What happened to me was wrong, and speaking it out loud is a step toward healing.
