I was placed in Murrayfield House Care Home between the ages of three and six. Even though I was very young, I can still remember how I was treated there and how it made me feel. From my recollection, I experienced many forms of abuse. The staff would shout at me, call me names, and make me feel embarrassed and ashamed in front of the other children. Whenever we did something they considered wrong, the verbal abuse became even harsher. I remember feeling frightened and confused, never understanding why the adults who were supposed to care for me were the ones hurting me. There were times when the abuse became physical. I remember being hit, and even at that age, I knew it wasn't right. I lived in a constant state of fear, always trying to avoid doing anything that might draw attention to me. I was also force fed, which made me feel powerless and scared. Being made to eat when I didn't want to, or when I physically couldn't, left me feeling like I had no control over my own body. I was bullied and treated differently from the other children, and it made me feel small, isolated, and unworthy. One of the things that made my time there even harder was that I was a bedwetter. Instead of being supported or helped, I was constantly reprimanded for it. I was made to feel ashamed for something I couldn't control, and I dreaded going to sleep because I knew I would be punished if I had an accident. I also experienced sexual abuse during my time there. Even though I was so young, the impact of that has stayed with me throughout my life. It has affected my mental and emotional wellbeing in ways that I still carry today.
