During my time there, things were awful. The staff used to lock me in rooms, sometimes for long periods, and I remember feeling completely trapped and helpless. They would scream and shout at me, call me names, and make me feel small and worthless. The way they treated us was terrible, and it wasn't just me — it happened to all of the boys.

The staff would slap me and physically hurt me. They would put us in headlocks and leg locks, calling it restraint, but it was painful and frightening. I was only a young lad at the time, and I didn't understand why the adults who were supposed to look after us were the ones hurting us. There was no sense of safety or care, only fear and confusion.

These experiences have had a lasting effect on my mental health. The way I was treated at such a young age has stayed with me, and it still affects how I feel about myself and how I cope with certain situations today.

Your statement for Care setting 2 continued

During my time at Aisla Children's Home, it was an awful experience. It felt no different from the other places I had been — the same fear, the same mistreatment, and the same lack of care. The staff would hit me and restrain me, but it never felt like proper restraint. They would twist my arms up my back, push me around, and hurt me. They called it "restraining," but in reality, it felt like being beaten up by the very people who were supposed to protect me.

I remember one incident where I put my hand through the bedroom window and had to be taken to hospital. Even then, I didn't feel supported or cared for. The staff were bullies, and they used their power to intimidate and control us rather than help us. They would shout, push us around, and make us feel small and scared.

Looking back, my time at Aisla had a real emotional impact on me. The constant fear, the physical pain, and the lack of safety have stayed with me. It was supposed to be a place where I could feel secure, but instead it became another environment where I felt vulnerable and unprotected.

During my time at Ballikinrain, it was the worst experience of all the places I had ever been. The staff used to beat me up, grab me, throw me around, and physically hurt me. There was no sense of safety or protection. Instead of caring for me, the staff were the ones causing the harm. I remember feeling constantly frightened, never knowing when the next incident would happen or who it would come from.

The other children in the home also sexually assaulted me. I was already dealing with so much fear and confusion, and this made everything even worse. I was bullied by them regularly, and the staff knew exactly what was happening. They saw the way I was being treated, but they chose to turn a blind eye. Their silence and inaction made me feel completely abandoned.

I never told anyone about the sexual assault at the time because I was terrified. I didn't feel like I had anyone I could trust, and I believed that speaking up would only make things worse. Even though I stayed quiet, I felt deeply neglected by the staff. They should have protected me, but instead they ignored the signs and allowed the abuse to continue.

The impact of what I went through at Ballikinrain has stayed with me throughout my life. I have been diagnosed with PTSD because of the events that happened there. The physical violence, the sexual assault, the bullying, and the complete lack of support from the adults who were supposed to care for me have all had a lasting effect on my mental health. Ballikinrain was supposed to be a place of safety, but it became the most traumatic experience I have ever lived through.
