During my time at Weedings Hall, it was a horrible experience from start to finish. The environment felt harsh and frightening, and I never felt safe there. If you stepped out of line, even in the smallest way, they would send you to bed and lock you in your room for 24 hours. You weren't allowed anything — no covers, no television, no shoes, nothing. I would be left sitting there freezing, feeling completely alone and punished in a way that felt cruel rather than corrective.

The staff would also restrain me, but it wasn't proper restraint. They would twist my hands up my back, hurting me on purpose, and push my face into the ground. It was painful and humiliating, and it was the staff doing this, the very people who were supposed to protect and care for me. I remember feeling terrified and powerless, knowing that if they decided to restrain me, it would end with me being hurt.

There were also several times when I was beaten up by some of the other children. Some of the girls, on more than one occasion, came into my room in the middle of the night while I was asleep. They dragged me out of bed and beat me. I was completely defenceless, half-asleep, and overwhelmed. I got jumped multiple times by the older girls, and every time it happened, the staff turned a blind eye. They saw what was going on, or at least knew about it, but they chose not to intervene. That lack of protection made everything feel even worse.

All of these experiences have had a lasting effect on my mental health. The constant fear, the violence, the neglect, and the feeling of being completely unprotected have stayed with me. Weedings Hall was supposed to be a place of safety, but instead it became one of the most damaging environments I ever lived in. The emotional impact of what happened there still affects me today.

During my time at Dock Street, it was the worst experience I ever had. It truly felt like the lowest point of my life. The staff and the people who lived there would talk down to me all the time. I was constantly bullied, called names, and shouted at. It felt like there was no escape from the negativity, and I remember feeling small and worthless because of how I was treated.

Things got so bad at one point that I actually ran away from the home. I didn't feel safe there, and running away felt like the only option I had. I was jumped on multiple occasions by the girls who lived there. They would beat me black and blue, and I was terrified of them. One incident that has stayed with me was when they put nails in my bed where I was supposed to sleep. I could have been seriously hurt, and it showed just how far the bullying had gone.

They would also take my clothes and hide them, leaving me embarrassed and stressed. I was scared to report any of this to the staff because I knew nothing would be done. If anything, reporting it would have made things worse for me, because the girls would retaliate. The staff neglected me, and they should have done so much more to protect me. Instead, they ignored what was happening right in front of them.

Even basic things like food were used as a form of control. They would give us food for the night, and if we didn't like it, we wouldn't get anything else to eat. There was no care, no understanding, and no support. It felt like everything was designed to make life harder rather than to help us.

Looking back, Dock Street had a huge impact on me emotionally. The bullying, the fear, the lack of support, and the constant feeling of being unsafe have stayed with me. It was supposed to be a place where I could feel protected, but instead it became one of the most damaging environments I ever lived in.

This has had a lasting affect on me mentally i still suffer with depression and anxiety now.
