I lived at Hunting Tower Road Children's Home, a place that should have kept me safe, but instead became a place of fear and pain. I was forced to sleep in a cold metal hospital bed, and when I was sick, no one helped me. I was ignored and left to suffer on my own.

If I wet the bed, I was humiliated and punished. I was made to wash the bedding myself, and staff would physically hurt me. I remember being dragged into a dark corner and attacked.

Those moments terrified me, and the trauma from them has stayed with me throughout my life.

Staff would pretend we had toys when visitors came, making it look like we were cared for. As soon as the visitors left, the toys were taken away. It made me feel lied about, invisible, and unworthy of kindness.

I was beaten, struck on the back of the head with a ruler and a belt. I was forced to attend church, and if I refused or showed any reluctance, I was physically hurt.

I learned very early that my feelings did not matter and that speaking up only led to more pain.

As I grew into adulthood, the damage from my childhood became impossible to ignore. I live with anxiety and PTSD, and these experiences have deeply affected my confidence and sense of self. I have carried fear, shame, and emotional pain with me for years.
