The two people who ran the home were Miss Mary Chandler and Miss Helen Stevenson. From my perspective as a child, it was clear that they did not care if I was attacked by other children. There were times when I was hurt by other residents, and nothing was done to protect me or to make me feel safe. What made it even more difficult was that both of them physically attacked me as well. This was not a one off incident—it happened regularly, and wooden spoons were often used as a form of punishment. As a child, I struggled to understand why the adults responsible for my care were also the ones causing me harm. It left me feeling frightened, confused, and completely unprotected.

Adults would come into the home—people who knew the owners—and they would take the boys camping. During these trips, the boys were sexually abused and it was 3-4 men who took them on the trip was aware of what was happening, and the atmosphere in the home made it impossible to feel safe. Knowing that adults were allowed to come in and harm children added another layer of fear and mistrust. It reinforced the sense that there was no one looking out for us and no one willing to intervene.

We were also starved if we misbehaved. Food was used as a punishment, and the fear of going hungry became part of daily life. There were times when I was forced to eat soap, and I remember being pinned down by other members of staff while this happened. These experiences were humiliating and frightening, and they left me feeling powerless. As a child, I didn't understand why such extreme measures were used or why my wellbeing seemed to matter so little.

I also ran away from the home, escaping into the forest whenever I felt I couldn't cope anymore. Running was the only way I knew to protect myself or to find a moment of relief from the fear and chaos inside the home. I was also not allowed to have friends, which made the isolation even harder. Without friendships or supportive adults, I felt completely alone.

Looking back, these experiences shaped my understanding of safety, trust, and resilience. They explain not only what I went through, but also how deeply those early years influenced the person I became.

If you'd like, I can continue rewriting the next section in the same style.

Your statement for Care setting 2 continued

George was one of the staff members at this home. It was run by the church and owned by the Salvation Army, with around ten members of staff working there. From my perspective, this home felt more manageable compared to some of the others I had been in. I still experienced moments of discipline, and I would sometimes get the odd clip on the ear, which was seen as normal at the time. Even so, the environment felt less threatening than what I had previously known. Although it was far from perfect, I remember feeling that this place was at least a little more stable, and that small difference mattered to me as a child trying to cope with everything I had already been through.
