At around the age of three, my siblings and I witnessed our dad stab our mother. Following that horrific event, in 1973, we were taken to Quarrier's Homes – Bridge of Weir. I was very young at the time, but these memories are burned into my mind, unforgettable. From the moment we arrived, the place felt dark and sinister. The atmosphere was immediately oppressive and terrifying. The staff were shouting constantly, creating a mood that was both depressing and scary for a young boy.

I was sent to a dormitory with six other children, including my brother. There was no education provided, no explanation, and absolutely no compassion. I was young, scared, and emotional, and from the very first moment, I was told to "shut it." The environment was filled with mental abuse. Staff would prod us, torment us daily to get reactions, and use physical force to restrain us, causing real pain. We were slapped with straps and belts as punishment. I couldn't cope with the pain—it was unbearable and would sting for days. Punishments were extreme and psychologically damaging. Sometimes we were forced to stand in corners all day without speaking, or we were locked in dark cupboards, which felt life-threatening and mentally tormenting. Each day was a nightmare. I was constantly hungry, and certain experiences have stayed with me vividly. I have spoken to the police about this, and it is going to trial this year.

There was no comfort, no understanding, no compassion. I remember the dark, sinister atmosphere and feeling scared for my life every day. Being placed in a room with six other children, including my brother, was overwhelming. I was punished for being a bed-wetter. I remember being stripped naked, hit with a belt, called names, and humiliated. I was deeply unhappy and scared in this place.

Occasionally, my mum was allowed to visit. One time, she shouted at the staff because of the bruises and marks on me. The woman in charge immediately put my mum down and threatened to stop her visits. She was controlling, not only of the parents but also of us as children. Her influence was terrifying and made me feel powerless.

I was in Quarriers Homes for about 11 months to a year, suffering constantly. Eventually, my mum moved us to England, taking us away from that place. However, the impact has stayed with me my entire life. Since then, I have struggled to trust people and build relationships. I never understood why I am the way I am. Over time, I have realized that much of my difficulty with authority, my tendency to isolate myself, my anxiety, depression, and sadness, all stem from these early experiences.

This trauma has profoundly affected my mental health and my ability to live a normal life. It has made me guarded, fearful, and constantly anxious. It has influenced every relationship I have had and continues to affect me to this day. The fear, humiliation, and abuse I endured have left scars that are not visible but are deeply felt, and it has undeniably shaped the person I have become.
