During this time in my life, things were awful. I stayed in multiple different places throughout the years, moving from house to house, being fostered by different families. I never felt like I truly fit in anywhere or that I was ever part of a real family. Each move felt like starting again, and I never had the stability or safety that a child should have.

I remember one house in particular when I was in Invergordon. One of the children who lived with us ended up staying there because of how badly we were all treated. The foster carers were Bobbi and Ian — I think that was her name. They used to get us up at 6am every morning to feed the animals, and if we weren't working, they would lock us in our rooms. There was no freedom, no kindness, and no sense of being cared for. They had several foster children living there at the time, and they were abusive to all of us. I remember one of the lads being battered really badly by them. It was so serious that eventually we were taken away from their care.

There was one incident that has stayed with me. A social worker came to visit, and instead of letting me speak to them, Bobbi locked me in my bedroom and refused to let me out. After that, our social worker was changed, but nothing was ever properly addressed. It made me feel silenced and powerless, like my voice didn't matter.

I also remember another woman from when I was younger. She used to go to church and took me with her every Sunday. On the surface she seemed caring, but she drank heavily every single night. When she was drunk, she became abusive. Eventually she made false accusations that I had hit her daughter, and because of that, I was moved again. It didn't matter that it wasn't true — I had no way to defend myself, and no one seemed interested in hearing my side.

Looking back, all of these experiences have had a lasting emotional impact on me. Moving constantly, being mistreated, being blamed for things I didn't do, and never feeling safe or wanted has shaped how I see myself and how I cope with the world. I never had the chance to feel settled or supported, and those years have stayed with me.
