- submit a previous statement (for example, a copy of a statement given to the police)
- write your statement in another format that is better suited to you

How to complete this section

You may have been abused in one relevant care setting, or in several different ones.

For this part of the application form, please provide a statement about each care setting you were abused in.

For example, if you were abused in 3 relevant care settings, please provide 3 statements.

You can do this in any order that makes sense to you.

There are pages for 4 care settings included in this form. If you need more copies, you can:

- contact a case worker
- make a copy yourself
- print additional pages from mygov.scot/redress

Please remember:

- there are no wrong answers - if Redress Scotland needs more or different information, your case worker will get in touch with you and let you know
- do not worry about your spelling
- use as much or as little space as you need to give your information - you can continue on additional pages if you want to

I was only fifteen when I was sent to Lancegrove Remand Home in Glasgow for three months, but those months felt like years. From the moment I walked through the doors, I knew it wasn't going to be a place where anyone cared about helping us or guiding us. The staff carried themselves like they were running some kind of old fashioned punishment camp, not a place meant to support young people. They spoke to us like we were nothing, throwing horrible names at us as if that was part of their job.

It didn't take long to realise that the rules there didn't matter as much as the moods of the adults in charge. They would hit us for no reason, sometimes just because they felt like reminding us who had the power. If you reacted, even flinched or tried to protect yourself, they would take that as an excuse to beat you worse. There was no winning. Staying quiet didn't help, and speaking up only made things harder.

The worst part was how normal it all seemed to them. They acted like this was the way things had always been done, like hurting kids was just part of the routine. They were forceful, cold, and sometimes downright cruel. When they restrained me, they didn't just hold me still—they used their strength in ways that felt evil, like they wanted to break me down. They did things no adult should ever do to a fifteen year old boy, and they did it without hesitation.

If you got into a fight with another resident, even if you were just defending yourself, they didn't try to understand what happened. They dragged you off to a room on your own and left you there. Isolation wasn't the end of it either. They would come in daily and give you beatings as if that was the only way to teach a lesson. It didn't teach anything except fear. It made you feel small, trapped, and constantly on edge.

Every day felt like walking on thin ice. You never knew what would set someone off. A look, a word, even breathing too loudly could get you in trouble. Nights were the worst, lying there wondering what the next day would bring, hoping it wouldn't be another round of punishment for something you didn't even do.

Looking back, I still can't believe how adults could treat kids that way. We were supposed to be protected, guided, maybe even understood. Instead, we were bullied by the very people who were meant to look after us. Lancegrove wasn't just a remand home—it was a place that left marks you couldn't see, the kind that stay with you long after you leave.
