When I was 15, my mum took me to Moorhouse Residential school. I was led into a room and told that my mum would join me shortly, but she never arrived. I felt abandoned by her because she preferred to host parties at home without me. At Moorhouse, we had two classes each week: one for English and another for chemistry. I didn't learn much since the teachers seemed indifferent. I shared a bedroom with another boy and was locked in at bedtime. A woman would sit outside our rooms starting at 9 PM, and if she heard us talking, we would be dragged out and forced to sit on a chair for hours in the middle of the night as punishment. There was a communal dining area where we were supposed to eat, but I felt uneasy dining with others because I wasn't used to it at home. So, I would steal food to eat alone in my room. The male staff would take me to the dining room and make me stay there for hours, knowing it upset me. The primary form of abuse we faced was when male staff would see us with friends, pull us aside, and then, when no one was watching, they would grab us by the neck and force us into the showers fully clothed. Once there, we had to keep our clothes on while they turned on the cold water, soaking us. This was meant to ruin our clothes and watches, which my gran had sent me and were quite expensive. This shower abuse occurred frequently, leaving me alone in soaking wet clothes, isolated from my friends. I was permitted to go out in the evening to visit the shops for cigarettes and other items, but if I returned even a minute late, I would face the shower treatment again. This enforced eating schedule and the showers continued throughout my entire stay at Moorhouse, resulting in severe depression, panic attacks, and flashbacks. I have been on various medications to manage these issues for most of my life.
