When I was at Red Shoe Children's Home, I was supposed to be safe. I was supposed to be cared for. Instead, I was physically attacked — by the staff, the very adults entrusted with my wellbeing, and by the other children around me. There was no escape from it. Violence was every single day. I woke up every morning not knowing how bad it was going to be, just knowing that it would be bad.

They watched us in the showers. I want you to understand what that felt like — as a child, vulnerable, exposed, with nowhere to hide and no one to protect me. It stripped away every last bit of my dignity. I felt utterly helpless, utterly alone, utterly worthless.

The mental abuse destroyed me from the inside out. It got so bad that the only way I could bear to exist was to turn to alcohol and drugs. That was what they reduced me to. And while I was drowning in my own pain, I watched other children being abused too — their cries, their faces — things I will never, ever be able to unsee.

I was just a child. I deserved so much better.

Now I am an adult and I am still fighting every single day. The PTSD, the anxiety, the mental health struggles — they never left me. What happened to me in that place stole so much of my life, and there are days when the weight of it is almost too much to bear. What was done to me was wrong. It should never have happened. And I will never stop carrying the scars of it.
