My earliest memories are of being told that I was going away for six weeks of respite, but instead I was taken into care for six and a half years, from the age of 8 until around 14 and a half. I was the only child taken from my mother, while my five siblings remained at home, and no one ever explained to me why this was happening. This caused deep confusion, distress, and a sense of abandonment that has stayed with me my entire life.

In 1973, I was taken to my first residential home, Nerston Residential Home in East Kilbride, where I remained for approximately four years. From the moment I arrived, my life deteriorated significantly. I was only eight years old, completely vulnerable, and surrounded by older children. I felt frightened, isolated, and alone.

The headmaster at Nerston, who I believe was named Mr Wilson, had a strong Irish accent and was extremely aggressive. He regularly shouted directly into my face, which terrified me, and he behaved this way towards many of the children. He would push and shove us in the hallways, and physical punishment was routine. The belt was used, and I was frequently restrained with excessive force. My body was small and fragile, and I was often left aching and in pain.

Staff would hold me down on the floor, claiming it was until I was calm, even when I already was. This caused significant pain, particularly to my wrists and body, and left me feeling powerless and humiliated. I learned that no matter what I did, the punishment continued.

I made a few friends at Nerston, including Jacqueline Cadbury, Thomas Dyer, and my close friend John Trayner (spelling uncertain). John was killed by a bus at Buchanan Street Bus Station, just off Cathedral Street in Glasgow, while travelling home for the weekend. I was never told about his death until the following Monday when I returned. At only eight years old, I was expected to travel alone by bus from Old Buchanan Bus Station to Nerston in East Kilbride, sometimes being allowed home on weekends and sometimes not. I now understand that my friend being left to travel alone was likely the reason he was killed. This loss has haunted me for my entire life.

At Nerston, food was rationed, and if we complained or spoke up, we were sent to our rooms hungry for the night. We were sometimes locked in our rooms, which was deeply distressing and frightening. Staff would also use my weekend visits home as a form of control and punishment, threatening to cancel them if I did not comply.

The staff watched me shower at all times, leaving me naked and exposed. This caused intense embarrassment, shame, and discomfort. While I cannot clearly remember being sexually assaulted, many memories are hazy, which I now understand can be a trauma response.

There was one house mother at Nerston, Miss Watt, who was kind to me. She is the only staff member I remember positively. I recall her because her sister went to school with one of my older sisters in Maryhill. Her kindness stands out because it was so rare.

Around the age of 12, I was moved to Thornton Residential Home in Crosshouse, run by Barnardo's, where I stayed for approximately two and a half years. The mental and physical abuse continued immediately. I was singled out by staff, punished for speaking back, and punished even when I tried to defend myself. I was taken to the gym hall, kept there alone, in the dark and cold, for as long as staff decided was necessary to break me down. Thornton terrified me. I was only allowed home once a fortnight, and only if I was on my absolute best behaviour. I remember the long drive up to the building from the bus stop, which filled me with dread. Staff would mock me, calling me unwanted, telling me I would never go home, and laughing at me. I was very small compared to the older children and completely out of my depth.

The older children bullied me relentlessly. I was threatened, slapped, had my hair pulled, and witnessed frequent violence. No one ever protected me. I lived in constant fear. Both staff and children repeatedly reinforced the message that I was unwanted, something I could not understand as a child and still struggle with today.

Because of the beatings, bullying, and constant emotional abuse, I ran away multiple times. Each time, I was brought back by the police, which only reinforced my belief that I had no escape and no voice. I could not understand why I was being punished and imprisoned in these places while my siblings lived at home.

I remained in care until around 14 and a half years old. The effects of this treatment have been lifelong. I received no proper education, no guidance on basic hygiene, no emotional support, and no explanation for why I was taken into care. To this day, I still do not have answers.

As an adult, I suffer from severe mental health difficulties, including complex PTSD, chronic anxiety, emotional distress, and long-term trauma. I struggle with trust, self-worth, and stability. I have never received the support or help I needed, either as a child or later in life.

I feel that my childhood was treated as meaningless, as though my suffering was a joke to others, and this has destroyed my sense of safety and identity. The neglect, abuse, and abandonment I experienced before and throughout care have permanently damaged my mental and emotional wellbeing.
