During my time at Linwood Hall, things were awful. I suffered a lot of mental abuse, and it affected me deeply. Many of the staff were ex army, and they were extremely strict. Their whole approach was harsh and intimidating. Staff would constantly scream in my face and force me to do whatever they wanted. There was no room for mistakes or even hesitation. If we hadn't done exactly what we were told, they would punish us by making us skip meals or by refusing to give us any cigarettes. It felt unfair and controlling, and it created an environment where fear was the only thing keeping us going.

I witnessed a lot of the younger children, especially some of the boys, being abused and beaten on a regular basis. Seeing that happen so often had a huge impact on me mentally. It made the place feel dangerous and unpredictable. I remember feeling helpless, knowing what I was seeing was wrong but also knowing there was nothing I could do to stop it. The fear of becoming the next target was always there.

Some of the boys were sexually abused. I didn't witness it directly, but a couple of different boys told me about what had happened to them. Hearing those things was deeply distressing. It added another layer of fear to everything else that was already happening. It made me realise just how unsafe we all were.

They would restrain us too, but it wasn't just a restraint. They would put you down on the floor and kick you in the back and treat it as if it was part of the process. It was painful, humiliating, and completely unnecessary. Every time it happened, it reinforced the feeling that we had no protection and no one to turn to.

I suffered a lot of mental abuse, and it reached a point where I tried to run away multiple times. Each time I was brought back, I would be punished. I wouldn't be allowed to do anything, and I wasn't allowed out while the others were. The isolation and the constant punishment had a massive impact on my mental health. It made me feel trapped, hopeless, and completely alone.

I also recall that at least one of the members of staff was a convicted paedophile. There was even a book written about him. Knowing that someone like that had been allowed to work there made everything feel even more frightening. It confirmed that the environment wasn't just strict or harsh — it was unsafe on every level.

All of these experiences combined have had a lasting effect on me. The shouting, the punishments, the violence, the things I witnessed, and the fear I lived with every day shaped the way I saw myself and the world. The mental impact has stayed with me, and I am still dealing with the effects of what happened at Linwood Hall.
