Dear Ann,

I have looked at your application and wanted to point out the eligibility criteria for the scheme. In particular, you told us about your abuse at a holiday setting. Holiday Settings are not always included as a relevant care setting in Scotland's Redress Scheme.

This information is in the statutory guidance on eligible care settings. You can read this at <https://www.gov.scot/publications/redress-survivors-historical-child-abuse-care-scotland-act-2021-s...>

From the information you gave us, it does not appear that the care setting you described is a relevant care setting. This means it might not be eligible for Scotland's Redress Scheme.

However, you should consider the full eligibility criteria in the statutory guidance, and if you feel you may be eligible, you can choose to continue your application. If you do, Redress Scotland will decide on your eligibility and make any decisions about your application.

I appreciate how disappointing it will be for you that Fornethy House Residential School is possibly excluded under the redress scheme. Whilst the abuse of children in all circumstances and settings is wrong, the exclusion of holiday settings is in keeping with the core purpose of the scheme, which is primarily for those vulnerable children who were in long-term care, often isolated with limited or no contact with their families.

Once you have fully considered the eligibility criteria, please contact me to confirm if you are choosing to continue with your application. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions or want to discuss this further.
