I was sent to Saughton Prison in 1985, when I was just 15 or 16 years old. I had never really been in trouble before, so being sent to an all-male prison was terrifying. From the moment I arrived, I was absolutely petrified. I remember being so scared that I literally felt like I was shitting myself. I was nervous, overwhelmed, and there was no one to comfort me or explain what was happening. I was thrown straight into an environment that was completely alien and frightening, with no preparation or support.

I was placed in a three-man cell with adult men, and I was just a boy. Being in B Hall, a remand hall for men over 21, was like being flung straight into the deep end. These were grown men, and I felt completely out of place and utterly vulnerable. The hall was full of bullies, and from the moment I arrived, I was targeted. It felt like hell. I was battered daily by the inmates, and the screws (prison officers) were constantly watching me, behaving like animals rather than protectors. The prison felt like a jungle, and I was scared for my life every single day.

My canteen would be taken from me, and I was bullied relentlessly. I was often starved or deprived of basic necessities. The inmates terrorized me daily, and what made it worse was that the staff allowed it to happen. No one stepped in to help, and I felt completely abandoned. The fear and constant threat left me on edge all the time.

During my time there, I started to suffer from PTSD, anxiety, and depression. My mental health deteriorated rapidly. I became trapped in a cycle of fear and hopelessness, where every day felt unsafe and unbearable. The sexual abuse began here at the hands of other inmates, which compounded the terror and trauma I was experiencing.

This period of my life felt like it was over before it had even begun. It was a horrible, nightmarish time, and the impact of being placed in such a violent, unprotected environment at such a young age has stayed with me ever since. My mental health continues to suffer badly as a result, and I carry the scars—both psychological and emotional—from this experience to this day.

If you want, I can also combine both your Ribleton and Saughton accounts into a single, long, cohesive first-person narrative that really emphasizes the lifelong impact on your mental health and wellbeing. This can be useful for legal statements, care reviews, or personal testimony.

Polmont Prison, 1986–1986

I was on remand in an adult prison again. From the moment I arrived, the environment was overwhelming, violent, and completely unsafe. There was constant destruction around me—smashing, fighting, chaos—and I was told to get involved in smashing the prison up too. I felt I had no choice but to comply because I was being bullied and singled out. I got involved under pressure, but it was terrifying; I had no sense of safety or control.

While I tried to survive, I was repeatedly beaten black and blue. The prison staff—what we called screws—would strip us out of our cells, strip me naked, and leave me exposed for hours at a time, sometimes all night. I had no dignity, no privacy, and no protection. I was forced to urinate in front of adult prisoners, completely humiliated and powerless. The adults in the prison didn't protect me—they bullied me, threatened me, and actively made my life worse. There was no one to look out for me.

I was starved frequently and beaten by both the staff and other inmates. Every day felt like a struggle just to survive. I was living in constant fear of what might happen next—whether it would be another attack, another punishment, or another act of humiliation. I was exposed to extreme violence and cruelty, and I knew that if I resisted or failed to comply, the consequences could be life-threatening.

The experiences I went through in Polmont have left lasting scars. I have struggled to build trust or form meaningful relationships with anyone since then. The anxiety I feel is relentless, and PTSD haunts me constantly with flashbacks, nightmares, and intrusive memories. I live with deep depression, a weight that never lifts, and a sense of ongoing trauma that affects every aspect of my life.

The impact on my life has been profound. My confidence and ability to connect with others were damaged at a formative age, and the emotional and psychological effects have followed me into adulthood. The humiliation, fear, and violence I endured have shaped who I am, leaving me constantly on edge and struggling to feel safe or valued. My life has been disrupted and, in many ways, ruined by what happened in that prison. I am still dealing with the consequences of being starved, beaten, humiliated, and exposed to life-threatening situations at a young age. The mental scars are deep, the anxiety is crippling, and the depression remains a constant presence. I continue to live with the trauma of that time, and it has affected everything—my relationships, my trust in people, and my ability to feel safe in the world.

If you want, I can also create a version that is even more immersive, describing day-to-day life in the prison in minute, intense detail, so it fully conveys the life-threatening and traumatic nature of your experiences. This can make it very powerful for legal, therapeutic, or personal accounts.

Do you want me to do that next?
